GTMO supports hurricane relief

By JO1 Bob Lamb

Relief efforts continue all over the United States and here in GTMO in an attempt to help victims of Hurricanes Katrina and Rita.

To date more than $1,000 has been donated by members of the local community and is being sent to the National Red Cross Disaster Services Headquarters in Washington D.C., specifically for the victims affected by Hurricane Katrina. In conjunction with the money, more than 2000 blankets and approximately 1,000 bed sheets recovered from the local DRMO warehouse are being stationed at the Leeward terminal awaiting a flight through Florida to be sent to the gulf region, but not until the residents of GTMO are supplied..

"At the time that I signed for the blankets I was thinking about our disaster needs here on this island," said Denise Clark, GTMO's Red Cross station manager. "This is my responsibility here, so in case we have a disaster here, we stored an extra 400 blankets and 800 bed sheets."

During the Jazz Festival the Red Cross collected more than $600 in one night.

Servicemembers and their families, along with civilians have given what they could during church services, school events, Morale, Welfare and Recreation activities, Fire Department events, and also through the upcoming Combined Federal Campaign.

Outreach programs such as the Salvation Army and the United Way have also received many donations from this command.

Many people have inquired about donating clothing to the Red Cross. Unfortunately the Red Cross does not collect used clothing due to the sheer logistics of cleaning and separating by size the number of different items that may be collected.

In addition to financial donations the Red Cross recommends that people contribute their time as well.. Currently there are 56 active Red Cross volunteers within the GTMO community ready to go to work in case of an emergency. Some of them donate their time as first aid responders, emergency case workers, special emergency event coordinators, and even some that work at the Public Works nursery.

"We're trying to recruit more than 40,000 new volunteers for the Red Cross," said Clark.

"The agency's goal is to recruit and train more than 40,000 disaster volunteers."

For more information about the American Red Cross and what they're doing to help in the relief efforts, go to redcross.org.

The full measure of the devastation of Hurricanes Katrina and Rita are still unknown. But it is clear that parts of the Gulf Coast from Alabama to Texas will take years to rebuild, and the military has been right in the middle of the devastation.

"Hurricane Katrina directly impacted an estimated 18,000 Navy families," said ADM Mike Mullen, Chief of Naval Operations. "In fact, many of the sailors providing relief to local citizens are in need of relief themselves. Most have lost something; some have lost everything. Throughout the crisis, even as our efforts to support the Joint Task Force ramped up, we never lost sight of our responsibility to help Navy families get back on their feet.

The Navy/Marine Corps Relief Society has already processed more than 4,000 cases, distributing more than $1.5 million in disaster assistance funds, and Tricare dispatched additional staff to a large number of evacuee sites to provide face to face counseling for Katrina beneficiaries.

"Hit hard by Katrina or not, please reach out," said Mullen. "Give your time and your talent to one of the many volunteer organizations contributing to the relief efforts. By damaging our bases in that region, it chipped away at some of our combat capabilities, but it did not destroy the human spirit and it did not destroy the Navy family. No one can wipe that out. We will stand by the Navy family as the Navy family has stood by us and I know I can rely on your support."

Local relief efforts are continuing says Clark, "This is a long term event."

Padre's Corner

We must choose responsibility

By LCDR S. J. Vanden Boogard

Many of us, during our lifetime, have been with a group on a camping trip or some other similar outing that extended over several days. Along with our enjoyment of the pleasures associated with such outings, there were probably certain assigned tasks handed out to each individual to perform for the group.

Since these outings were away from "civilization," the pleasure and convenience of the group depended on our accomplishing our assigned chores. There was no place to hide from responsibility and no one to pass the buck to.

On our job in the military or in the community it is easier to avoid our responsibilities or to "let Sam do it."

The outdoors person is self-reliant because they accept responsibility as being a part of life.

Everyone, regardless of their job or station in life, has responsibilities — to their employer, i.e. the military — their family, and to the community in which they live.

Emerson once said: "Man is a knot of roots, and his responsibilities lie in the proper nurture of those roots to produce the flowers of life".

Success comes to those who do what they should not by expecting others to do it for them.

We need to bring our desires in line with our responsibilities, not try fitting our responsibilities in with our wishes.

Discipline is involved in responsibility, which involves the proper execution of the routine and even the unpleasant tasks. It involves confidence and judgment—to choose the best and to do the best.

Most of us are careful about our personal appearance. Responsibility is the same care applied to our work, family, community, and Shipmates, Battle Buddies, or Wingmen.

The measure of our progress in life is our positive acceptance of our responsibilities. Many times it can involve assuming more obligation than we realize.

Come one, come all to the Navy Ball

By CMDM(SW/SS) Larry Cairo

It's that time again. We are in full swing with the ball season, which began in August with the Fireman's Ball, and the Navy Ball is quickly approaching.

This year we are beginning a new tradition with the Navy Ball, we are having two celebrations. In the past the base has only had about 600 Sailors, but now with the influx of Sailors for the Joint Task Force (JTF), we have more than 1,300 Sailors stationed on the base.

Because of the increase in personnel, and the fact that the Windjammer can only hold about 350 comfortably, we needed to add another celebration for those who will not be able to get tickets for the first celebration.

Many other installations around the world stagger their celebrations of the Navy's birthday to allow for maximum participation in the area's events.

This year marks the 230th anniversary of the birth of the U.S. Navy, which occurred on Oct. 13, 1775. Here in Guantanamo Bay, however, we are celebrating the Navy's birthday on Oct. 21 and 22, so as not to interfere with the Navy Exchange customer appreciation activities that are happening the week of the Navy birthday.

The formal ball is on Friday, Oct. 21, at the Windjammer Club. Tickets are very reasonable ($5 for E-4 and below, $15 for E-5 and E-6, and $25 for E-7 and above), and the price includes a commemorative glass and coin, and a prime rib dinner. The band will be 'Wild Gypsy,' and they play a large selection of music. There will be many door prizes including a set of Callaway golf clubs with bag donated by Steve Eubanks, a writer for Golf Digest and author of many other books, who visited us last week.

The prescribed uniform for this year's formal ball is the best uniform available, in an effort to accommodate our Sailors assigned to JTF. They were given the opportunity to bring all their uniforms and we do not want to limit their opportunity to celebrate the Navy's birthday with us.

Many people have inquired about dual military families — if one can attend in uniform and allow the other to wear formal civilian attire. The answer is yes, our goal is go have everyone celebrate with us.

In addition to the traditional Navy Ball, we are having an informal Navy birthday party this year as well, which is being held Oct. 22 at the ferry landing beach. Casual wear is the order of the day. Feel free to come in shorts and beach sandals.

The tickets to this event are very reasonable ($3 for E-4 and below, $5 for E-5 and E-6, and $7 for E-7 and above) and the price includes a commemorative mug and a meal. There will also be a live band at this event, the same band that is playing at the formal ball the night before.

The main reason for the informal ball at the beach is to encourage participation from our personnel who were unable to bring formal attire.

Additionally, we will have buses driving throughout the base picking people up and taking them to the ball, so people do not have to worry about driving and finding a place to park, or worry about drinking too much and not being able to drive home.

This is a night of celebration, not people getting into trouble.

Sailors at Guantanamo Bay's 2004 Navy Ball have a good time on the dance floor.

But the Navy's Birthday is not just for Sailors, it is for Soldiers, Marines, Airmen, Coast Guardsmen, and civilians as well. Anyone who wants to come to the birthday events may do so.

Cost for anyone not previously mentioned (active duty or government civilian equivalent) is $25 for the formal ball, and $7 for the beach party. Get a ticket and join the festivities. We want to celebrate our Navy's Birthday with everyone.

Let's make this Navy Ball the best GTMO has ever seen and the start of a new great GTMO tradition.

Read October's book selection

Sue Monk Kidd's 'The Mermaid Chair,' is the soulful tale of Jessie Sullivan, a middle-aged woman whose stifled dreams and desires take shape during an extended stay on Egret Island, where she is caring for her troubled mother, Nelle.

Like Kidd's stunning debut novel, 'The Secret Life of Bees,' her highly anticipated follow-up evokes the same magical sense of whimsy and poignancy. By boldly tackling such major themes as love, betrayal, grief, and forgiveness, 'The Mermaid Chair' forces readers to question whether moral issues can always be interpreted in black or white.

It is this ability to so gracefully present multiple sides of a story that reinforces Kidd's reputation as a well-respected modern literary voice. — review by Gisele Toueg.

Critical Days of Summer

It's all about reducing safety mishap statistics

By Ken Testorff, Editor, Sea&Shore magazine

The 2005 "Critical Days of Summer" are over, and the results are encouraging.

Navy traffic deaths were 40 percent lower than predicted (15 compared to a predicted 25).

The Navy PMV mishap rate reached a 10-year low for this high-risk period, and Marine Corps PMV deaths were well below the FY02-04 average.

Recreation deaths were 20 percent lower than predicted.

The campaign wasn't a total success, though, because, although Navy recreation-related deaths are below predictions, they are the same as last fiscal year's total (eight), and the rate is slightly higher (7.73, compared to 7.54 last year).

Eight of 15 Navy PMV deaths were from motorcycles. Among remaining PMV fatalities, four were passengers.

Among Navy recreation deaths, three were drownings and one was from an ATV mishap.

Marine fatalities during the period included four in motorcycle mishaps and one recreational mishap on a jet ski.

Overall, 23 of the people who died were aged 25 and under. These overall results show that significant mishap reduction is possible.

However, the numbers also show that more must be done to meet the latest Navy and Marine Corps slogan, "A Mishap-Free Navy + Marine Corps Team!" And each Critical Days fatality indicates just how far we have to go to ensure everyone is aware of risks and makes good decisions.

The Naval Safety Center publicizes the 16-week "Critical Days of Summer" campaign every year, trying to convince our "bulletproof" young men and women stop and think twice about the possible consequences of their actions.

For more information on current and past "Critical Days of Summer" campaigns and for detailed data, visit www.safety-center.navy.mil/statistics/criticaldays/.
